

Rutgers University conducts international skill development training sessions at Lavasa

- PSU executives undergoes the training programme

Lavasa, September 25, 2014: Rutgers University, the globally renowned social welfare institute, which established its footprint in Lavasa early this year, concluded two successful training sessions of the 'International Certificate Program in Training Skills' recently.

The first batch held from 13th–16th September, 2014 saw attendance of 22 senior professionals from PSUs viz. Oil India Ltd., Air India, Mumbai University, Sardar Patel College of Engineering, Walchand College of Engineering, TRSS Skills Academy and Sri T. P. Bhatia College of Science Junior College and from various fields of learning & development from universities, engineering colleges, international training academies and other renowned education institutes.

The second batch of this program took place from 18 – 21 Sept., 2014 and was attended by 31 learners from PSUs and other corporates engaged in learning & development, HRD, trainers from top engineering colleges, international schools and academies viz. Oil India Ltd., JK Tyres, Odisha Television Ltd., VJTI, Sardar Patel College of Engineering, Walchand College of Engineering, SGGS Institute of Engineering & Technology, Vibgyor International School, Wren & Pecker, Himalayan Institute of Mountaineering, to name a few.

Commenting on the training programmes offered by Rutgers, Nathan Andrews, President, Lavasa Corporation Limited said, “Lavasa is fast emerging as an educational hub with the presence of globally renowned educational institutes. Rutgers is New Jersey’s flagship state university and one of the top research institutions in USA. They conduct exceptional training programs to enhance professional growth and strengthen organizations and the communities served by the participants. Enhancing skills enables professionals to achieve work excellence.”

The two day comprehensive training programme addressed a plethora of taxing aspects faced by training fraternity like increasing knowledge retention and satisfaction from the participants; designing & delivering memorable and effective training; creating effective presentations, irrespective of the topics; group skills etc.

Skill development is the need of the hour for creating an effective and an able workforce. The School of Social Work which is an arm of the Rutgers University, conducted these sessions which were at par with the international standards of training and offered a compelling glimpse into the day to day challenges of the training fraternity. This enabled participants to augment their vision while looking out for solutions to their problems. The overall training was hence, an enriching experience.

With the Modi-led government stressing on the constant need for skill upgradation and training of the youth, the importance of such programmes is increasing by the day.
